

Siam Hop Routes in Bangkok

National Museum Bangkok

This first museum of Thailand was established in King Rama V's reign. Originally, it was situated at Sahathai Samakom Pavilion inside the Grand Palace before it was moved to the current location next to Silpakorn and Thammasart University in 1987. There is an exhibition about Thai history from pre-historic period, historic period including Tawarawadee period, Srivichai period, Lopburi period to Rattanakosin period. The atmosphere is rigid and strict, more suitable for those who are deeply interested in Thai history. SiamHOP can assure you that every historical item exhibited here is very rare and valuable.

Queen Sirikit Museum of Textiles

This museum is originated from Her Majesty Queen Sirikit who has a passion in Thai textiles and would like to have a museum to showcase and preserve them. Since 2002, the renovation of colonial building around Phra Borom Maha Ratchawang district has begun in order to set up this textiles museum. There is an exhibition like Fit For a Queen: Her Majesty Queen Sirikit's Creations by Balmain to celebrate Her Majesty the Queen's birthday in 2016. Its highlight is Her Majesty Queen Sirikit's clothes designed by Pier Balmain, the French designer who had been the main designer for 22 years.

Nang Loeng Market

The market of Thai savory snack and sweets is hidden in the beautiful old-style structure. It has been a lively community since King Rama V's reign. This is the first inland market of more than a hundred years old. It is well-known for its street food such as egg noodle with crab and grilled pork. With such a small area, it is very easy and convenient to immerse yourself into this food destination and nibble the best of the city's local food.

Golden Mount

It is the only temple in Bangkok which is situated on a mountain. On top is Baromhanot or a golden chedi on a man-made mountain at the highest spot of the temple. Thai people, therefore, often call this place Wat Phu Khao Thong (Golden Mount). But the official name of this temple is Wat Saket. This temple has been here since the beginning of Rattanakosin. Every November, the temple holds the most bustling temple fair. Buddhists and tourists can pay respect to Buddha's relic brought from Kapilavastu during King Rama V's reign. The opening time is 7 AM - 12 AM. The temple fair is usually held during the Loy Krathong Day period. An original temple fair in a big city is such a rare sight now. Come and climb up Golden Mount for a panoramic view of Bangkok!

Museum Siam

The museum emphasizes on interactive experience by allowing the audience to take part in the exhibit. The building is in pastel yellow packed with edutainment through its permanent exhibition "Essay of Thailand" composing the history of Thailand. There is also a monthly temporary exhibition. And each theme addresses controversial topics like gender equality, education, and Asean culture. With the interactive presentation, you will get edutained and enjoy exploring the exhibition.

Assumption Church

Its Renaissance style cathedral is one of the oldest and the most beautiful in Thailand built a century ago, designed by French architect. Marbles and color glass were finely selected and shipped from France, Singapore and Italy. Cathedral's ceiling and walls are decorated with beautiful Fresco. Unfortunately, the church was destroyed by bomb during World War II but later renovated by Christians in Thailand for more than 6 years. The church is open for public visit.

Chatuchak market

The reason that makes Chatuchak market the legend is not because it has been open for more than 40 years, but it is the market that has been specially planned out for shopping and you will not be able to walk around within one whole day. This is because Chatuchak Market has the most projects of storefronts, 27 projects altogether, totaling of over 8,000 storefronts. They also have different types and quality of categories of products available, such as clothes, pets, plants, vegetable and fruits, cooked food, instant food, fresh food and miscellaneous products. This place has all that you wanted to shop. It is the reason why many people would spend their weekends walking around Chatuchak Market so they will get new ideas and be inspired.

Khao Sarn Road

The current picture of cluttering pub and bars lined along this short road would be hard for you to imagine the origin of its name. This road was once the largest rice trade center in the city in the reign of King Rama VI. Time flies and hippie movement emerged. More and more tourists came and stayed on this road due to its convenient location for visiting Rattanakosin island. Guest-houses mushroom to accommodate flocking backpackers. More and more shops, restaurants, pubs and bars are opened up. Khao Sarn Road is sure to be one of the first words that backpackers know when they ride a taxi to their first destination in Thailand.

Cafe de Norasingha

Cafe de Norasingha is not only a part of Phaya Thai Palace, but also is the only coffee shop that perfectly remains that atmosphere of ancient palace and looking very elegant. It is also filled with history since they first open in the reign of King Rama 6 until nowadays. They have relocated from Sanamrupeha to Phaya Thai Palace to serve you the original delightful and delicious beverages for all to try.

Ghost Gate Goodies

All the Thai food-lovers must have heard about the Ghost Gate. Once the sun sets, this quarter becomes awake and crowded with Thai and foreign foodies queuing for the must-try dish like Thip Samai Pad Thai or Pad Thai Pratu Phee. And it is not wrong if you love another Pad Thai shop next door too. Whichever tastes right for you is the best! And the one and only street food with one Michelin star award cannot be anyone else but Jay Fai. You will love the omelet with giant chunks of crab meat. If you plan to try the food here, come before 5 PM. As the later, the longer queue. You may have to stand for hours. Do not say we did not warn you!

Wat Pho

Believe it or not Wat Pho is not only a temple but also the first open university of Thailand. There are many steles inscribed with old historical knowledge. However, the true attraction drawing tourists all around the world is Thai Massage. Wat Pho is considered the best Thai massage school. Come and try just once and find out how good and relaxing it is! You can also find comforting hermit statues all around the place.

Yaowarat
Known as Thailand's Chinatown, Yaowarat is the largest residence of Chinese community. Lavished with Chinese architecture, it is a large retail and wholesale trade center of consumer products from China as well as general merchandise. Gold shops are lined side by side, showing off their vivid colorful shop signs. What a sight! However, the extravaganza of Yaowarat lies in its scrumptious food on both sides of the street. From bustling food stalls to top-notch restaurants, only well-selected ingredients are used to cook. Yaowarat is naturally crowded with people hungry for tasty street food and this neighborhood becomes even more vibrant during Chinese New Year and Vegetarian Festival.

SANEH SIAM

Asiatique

Asiatique the Riverfront was an old port of East Asiatique Co., Ltd. owned by Danish, exporting goods from Asia to Europe since the period of King Rama V. The warehouse was later turned into the first riverside shopping arcades where you can visit for fine dining restaurants and shopping from more than 1000 shops.

CBD ROUTE

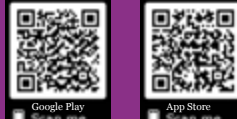

This route is ideal for exploring the vibrant life that Bangkok is so well known for. Our Siam Hop bus will drive you through both Silom Road, the present-day commercial business district of Bangkok, as well as the old Charoen Krung Road which, over 150 years ago, was the first paved road in the city. Asiatique's facilities and lovely riverside restaurants is a 'must' for visitors to Bangkok. Using Siam Hop Pass in the early evening is the perfect way to get there. Bangkok's newest landmark, the Mahanakorn Building, where you will be mesmerized by the incredible views from Bangkok's tallest building, is also our recommended HOP STOP along this route.

HERITAGE ROUTE

Highlights along this route are many historical places in Bangkok that can be explored from day to night. Colonial style buildings are a significant part of the landscape in this area. First settled on the east side of the mighty Chao Phraya River, this is where the Royal Grand Palace & the Emerald Buddha Temple can be found. Many famous temples, including Wat Trimit (The Golden Buddha), Wat Pho (The Reclining Buddha), Wat Suthat (The Giant Swing), Wat Ratchanadda (The Metal Castle) and Wat Benjamabophit (The Marble Temple) and much more can be visited with our Siam Hop Pass.

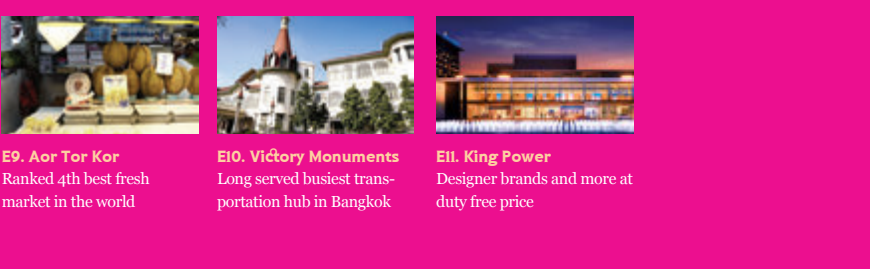

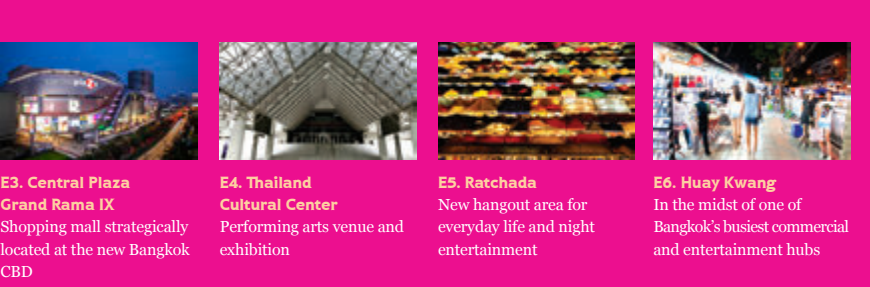

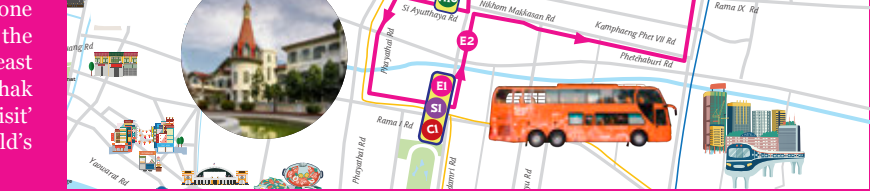

Aor Tor Kor

The 4th fresh market in the world, located next to Bangkok's busy Chulalongkorn Road. Not only fresh food to be available in the market, but also authentic Thai food and high quality local and imported fresh fruits.

Phaya Thai Palace

This old Palace has been changed to several statuses. It begins with being a small palace where King Chulalongkorn the Great (Rama V) resided and was built since B.E. 2452 (1909). After that, during the reign of King Mongkut Kiao Chao Yu Hua, Rama VI, had given order to restructured the palace and built 4 new palaces before turning the place in the Phaya Thai Hotel, the most luxurious hotel of the Eastern World.
